

Bernt Arne Ødegaard is a Professor at the University of Stavanger. He has a PhD of finance from Carnegie Mellon University (1992). His thesis paper on fixed income securities was published in the Journal of Finance (1997). His current research interests include empirical asset pricing, market microstructure, risk management and corporate governance. He has previously taught at the Universities of Illinois (Chicago) and British Columbia (Vancouver), and at the Norwegian School of Management (Oslo). He holds a part time position in the Norwegian Central Bank's research department. He was director of the PhD program in Financial Economics at the Norwegian School of Management BI for eight years. His research is published in journals like the Journal of Finance, Journal of Financial Markets and the Journal of Banking and Finance. He has, with Professor Peter Bossaerts at Caltech, written a textbook: Lectures on Corporate Finance.